The death of George Floyd has fueled outrage not only in the United States but across the globe. In Paris, this summer marchers took to the streets to denounce the exoneration of three law enforcement officers in the 2016 death of 24-year-old Adama Traoré, the French-born son of Malian immigrants. Join Jacqueline Couti, the Laurence H. Favrot associate professor of French Studies in the Department of Modern and Classical Literatures and Cultures, and associate director of the Center for the Study of Women, Gender and Sexuality, for a panel discussion that examines race and policing through a local and global lens. By recognizing the global nature of racism and structures of oppression, this forum looks abroad as a means to enhance understanding of local expressions of prejudice.

This online event is open to the Rice community and the public. To register for your Zoom link, please visit caaas.rice.edu/events.

Sponsors: Center for African and African American Studies, a collaboration between the School of Humanities and the School of Social Sciences; Department of Modern and Classical Literatures and Cultures and the Center for the Study of Women, Gender and Sexuality